

Religious Conflict and the Church in England

Introduction

Religious Conflict and the Church in England represents 40% of your A-level grade for History at Rainham Mark Grammar School. The course examines in-depth religious policy and changes in Tudor England c1529-c1570 and covers the reigns of four Tudor monarchs.

Your preparation tasks for this section of the A-level course has been designed to provide you with strong contextual knowledge from the Tudor period. Therefore some of the areas you will be researching will be focused on what England was like at the start of the course in 1529 and also what Henry VIII was like as a monarch and what his priorities were. From your reading of the title of this course Religious Conflict and the Church in England, it should be clear that religion is central to your understanding but as you conduct your research, you should be conscious of the other changes and policies of the time to identify links with religious policy. As you conduct your research, here are some important questions for you to consider. You may not have a definitive answer for all of these questions but hopefully they will lead you to make some connections within your research.

How important was religion to Tudor society?

What changes in Europe worried Henry VIII?

Did Henry VIII use religion to strengthen his position as monarch?

Are Henry VIII's six marriages all for love or are there other motives?

How easy is it for Henry to make changes within his government?

How rich was the Catholic Church in the 16th century?

The below research tasks can be conducted at your own pace using the reading lists below but also any other pieces of information you can find in your home or online. If you have any questions about the content or if you want to check any facts (if you feel you have encountered some dubious online information, or 'fake news', about Henry VIII) then please feel free to contact either of the History teachers teaching

Research task 1 – Who are the Tudors and what do they want?

Your first task is to identify which monarchs are considered to be ‘The Tudors’. While you do study most of the Tudors, there is one you do not study in detail but it is important to have an understanding of how they came into power as it directly affects Henry VIII’s policies and his worries about security.

Here are some research questions for you to answer:

1. Find the origin of the family name Tudor
2. Identify how the Tudors came into power as royalty
3. Create a family tree of the Tudors
4. Can you identify any threats to Tudor power?
5. Can you identify how the Tudors are supported throughout their reign?

Research task 4 – Corruption and abuse in the medieval Catholic Church

Create a newspaper article exposing the problems and corruptions in the Catholic Church in England

One argument against the medieval Catholic Church was their failure to obey their own strict rules. Here is a case from English Heritage
